Your PATH to recovery starts here.

More than 60 years ago, Presbyterian Manors of Mid-America pioneered a new concept of caring for seniors. In keeping with this tradition, and as part of our commitment to helping individuals live the way they want to live, we offer the PATH (Post-Acute to Home) program. PATH is designed to meet the growing need for care following a hospital stay.

You will discover a time-tested approach to rehabilitative care. PATH is your next step to going home — and to getting back to your life.

The PATH neighborhood includes:

- Private and semi-private rooms with a flat-screen TV
- Living room for relaxing or visiting with loved ones
- Delicious meals
- Coffee bar, beverages and snacks available 24 hours per day

The right care, the right way.

Under the supervision of a physician and registered nurse, each patient in the PATH program will receive skilled therapy and skilled nursing services that contribute to their recovery. Our dedicated team of doctors, nurses, therapists and social workers tailor individual programs to meet patients' personal and medical needs. The PATH program provides the necessary care to help individuals regain functionality and live life on their terms again.

Presbyterian Manors has a track record of successful rehabilitation outcomes. In fact, many PATH program patients are able to regain their functional independence, and in many cases are able to return to their previous lifestyle.

Services include:

- Physical therapy, to decrease pain and improve strength, endurance, balance and range of motion
- Occupational therapy, to improve one's ability to complete everyday activities of daily living
- Speech therapy, to improve overall communication as well as alleviate swallowing issues that can result in poor nutrition or dehydration

Your goals are our goals.

Working together with loved ones makes our PATH program successful, and regular family conferences are held to expedite recovery and aid the transition to home. Held to the highest standards, PATH team members are committed to:

- Extended admission hours to meet the needs of the medical community and families
- Continued communication with families and physicians on the patient's progress, and a full outcomes assessment detailing achieved goals upon discharge
- Dedication to reducing re-admissions through pre-admission assessments, clinical in-patient management, proactive discharge planning and community follow-up

Each person we serve is partnered with a specialized intake coordinator, who works with a network of physicians, social workers and family members to make the admissions process easier.
